Ev-ry Yan-kee who's a Yan-kee is so proud of it. And you must ad-Ev-ry Yan-kee who's a Yan-kee sticks right to the end. And when he's a mit. He al-ways does his bit. Smith or Jones, or Brown or Cohen or Doyle may be his friend. On him you can de-pend. He's right there to do his share for those who are in name. He nev-er is a-shamed to let you know from whence he came. He al-ways is a need. It makes him feel so hap-py when he's done a no-ble deed. You'll rec-og-nize a friend to ev-ry man. He's glad to help him an-y time he can Yan-kee an-y-where. His spir-it seems to dom-in-ate the air

CHORUS

His Maj-es-ty, the A-mer-i-can. You can knock him down but he'll come right up a-gain. He does not save great rich-es, a king-dom, or a throne. He'd rather be the king of his lit-tle home sweet home. A friend in need and a friend in deed. He's a gen-tle-man in ev-ry way. Tho he may set-tle down in some land by the sea You can bet your bot-tom dol-lar that he'll al-ways be. His Maj-es-ty the Amer-i-can. He's a cred-it to the U. S. A. His A.
